

I think Satellite Radio is one of the best things to happen to the broadcast industry in a long time. I get to listen to what I want when I want in the comfort of my car. It encourages (or should) the local radio stations to improve their services too. Why are people afraid of healthy competition? Satellite is a pay service - one of the few services I am delighted to pay for - and I don't think the NAB should get itself involved and dictate to me what they think I should hear.
